AMBA's Emerging Leaders Access Mentorship Opportunities with New Program Offering

Indianapolis, IN – Members of AMBA's Emerging Leaders Network – a community of 40-and-under young professionals passionate about leadership growth and industry advancement – will discuss operational leadership, risk-taking, communication challenges, and problem-solving strategies during in AMBA's newest, "Meet the Mentor" series. This program track provides an opportunity to industry executives and up-and-coming leaders to address challenges facing the next generation of leadership in mold manufacturing.

Each quarter, AMBA's Emerging Leaders will hear from seasoned industry professionals, who will provide insight into a core challenge previously identified by the Network. During each session, attendees will be challenged to:

- Reflect on the area of interest in their own workplace
- Generate and implement best practices and solutions applicable to their own facility
- Connect with their peers for a follow-up discussion on their observations and future improvement goals specific to their organization

The next session will be held on April 8, 11AM EST, and will highlight the experiences of CFO Charles Daniels, Wepco Plastics, Inc. and General Manager Justin McPhee, Westfall Twin Cities (formerly Mold Craft). Together, these mentors will share how embracing risk and its inevitability have led to new and diverse opportunities, positive bottom-line impact, the ability to "fail-proof" tasks and decisions and continued professional empowerment.

Session themes will vary quarter-to-quarter and will include separate peer connection opportunities. Cost $29/AMBA member. To register, visit AMBA.org/Events/.
